

Jim Leach

Vice President Marketing
RagingWire Data Centers

As a marketing executive, sales leader, and systems engineer, Jim Leach has enjoyed a 30-year career building technology and services businesses for commercial and government organizations.

For the last 15 years, Jim has been at the forefront of developing innovative Internet services for enterprises. He was part of the core team that introduced ultra-high availability data center colocation, second generation cloud computing solutions, virtual private networks (VPNs) and route optimization, application hosting, content delivery networks (CDNs), Internet registry and DNS (domain name system) services, and web performance monitoring and testing.

Jim spent the first 15 years of his career at IBM starting out as an engineer and then moving into sales, business development, and marketing. For the last 10 years, Jim has been a top marketing executive at Savvis, Internap, Neustar, Harris Corporation, and now RagingWire.